Do you have a sub dash time 4.5, 40 yards? Can you fold 225 pounds at least 10 times? Is your 40-inch vertical jump approaching? Can you squat three times your body weight or more? If you're like me, the answer to all these questions is no. Should you quit football because you're not the fastest and strongest? Absolutely not. If he keeps asking the question, is football right for me? Of course. While the amount of raw talent you have been given is not really in your control, there are some aspects of the football game that are. As in the rest of your life, in football, a good attitude goes a long way to improving your performance. Are you the guy who goes down and complains because you didn't make the first team? When you get destroyed in a play, sit down and sit down next time, or do you get up again and go for it again? Maintain a good attitude, get up and go again. A positive attitude goes a long way to helping not only your game, but your teammates as well. This game is so full of strategies, techniques and schemes. So much so, that many NFL coaches are hired simply for their extensive knowledge of the game, whether they are great motivators or not. His ability to know the game, his position, and his opponent will go a long way to helping him achieve success regardless of the physical and athletic hand he has been dealt. If you can't beat them physically, beat them. I used to get frustrated when there were guys who could get over, get over and get up all day that I wouldn't go full speed in practice. I would go all out, they wouldn't, and we'd finish the same place during the drills. I kept thinking, If I had my heart for this game, I'd be heading to the NFL. There is no excuse for not giving as much effort as you can all the time. This is a variable you can control, and you should never give less than 100 percent. It is my view that from Pop Warner to the top ranks of high school, a high level of achievement can be achieved with a relatively low level of raw talent. As you grow up and mature, your body may or may not catch up with your teammates on the football team. But, if you implement those three principles, you will be a much more successful football player either way. Google Pixel 4 is here. It's packing an awesome camera, more RAM than ever before, and there's no notch in sight. Hooray! This year's Pixel is offered in three different colors, including Oh So Orange, Clearly White, and Just Black. They all look great, but if you ask us, there is one that stands out above the rest. Need help deciding which color is right for you? Let's take a closer look at all of them. The staff certainly choose, Oh So Orange is our favorite Pixel 4 color. Google always offers something fun alongside its usual black and white issue, and Oh So Orange continues this trend Along with the vibrant orange back, there is also a plain black frame, black bezel on the front of the phone, and an orange orange button to tie the whole package together. We just wish it wasn't a limited edition. From $799 on Amazon Last, but not least, there's only black. This might be considered the most boring color for the Pixel 4, but that doesn't mean it won't appeal to many people. Just Black's Pixel 4 is the most stealth variant of your phone, with the camera hump appearing to fade into the rest of the design (which we greatly appreciate). The power button is also coated in black, creating for a super stealthy and faint aesthetic everywhere. From $799 on Amazon The Oh So Orange Pixel 4 looks oh so good We don't think any of the color options in the Pixel 4 are bad in any way, but Oh So Orange stands out as our clear favorite. This is the most vibrant and visually interesting color you can get for your phone, and it's a little different from the Pixel 3 and 3rd Not Pink and Purple-ish colors that were considerably more subdued. Oh So Orange's orange backside looks incredible, offering a warm and colorful tone without being too punchy or intense. It's paired with an orange power button to tie the whole packet together, and the black camera hump, black frame and black bezel around the screen offer a good contrast to the vibrant orange. There is a pretty big disadvantage to all this greatness, though. Oh, so orange is a limited edition color for the Pixel 4, which means that once it's gone, it's gone forever. As such, if you want this color for yourself, it is better to place your order sooner rather than later. If you're buying a Pixel 4, you owe it to yourself to consider how to get your phone to Oh So Orange. It has an incredibly unique design and stands out compared to its siblings. If Oh So Orange is a little too intense for your personal preference, the next color we would recommend checking is clearly white. Clearly White ditches the orange back for a firm white, giving the Pixel 4 a sense of minimalism. The rear camera hump stands out more in the Distinctly White Pixel 4, and while it offers a good contrast, it may be too garish for some potential buyers. Also, there's an orange power button to add some pop of color! What we especially like about the Distinctly White Pixel 4 is that it has a black frame to go along with the white back. This design choice goes back to the panda/stormtrooper color for the Pixel 2 XL in 2017, and is a small design decision that ends up creating for a truly exceptional package. Rounding out the Pixel 4 color trio, we have Just Black. As the name suggests, Just Black is, well, just black. Everything about this version of the Pixel 4 is covered by a black paint job: the rear glass, frame, rear camera, display bezel and even the power button. It is incredibly stealthy and is by far the most elegant Pixel 4. Some people might consider the Just Black Pixel 4 to be boring, but others are required to love its simplistic nature. If you're someone who wants your gadgets to fade background instead of going out into the world to see, Just Black makes more sense of everything on offer. This is also the only Pixel 4 color to have a bright glass back, while Oh So Orange and Clearly White has a matte finish. For those of you who want their technology to fade smoothly into the background, there's Just Black. This elegant and stealthy Pixel 4 color knows exactly what it is and owns it. Houston also wore the number 29 jersey, while Hubbard donned several other uniform numbers throughout his career, including 36, 40 and 51. Brandon Jacobs wore the no.27 for most of his nine-year NFL career before switching to No.34 in 2013. Robert Hubbard and Ken Houston were inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1963 and 1986 respectively. Hubbard began his professional career in the 1920s, spending two years as a lineman with the New York Giants before moving to the Green Bay Packers in 1929. He spent nine seasons in professional football, earning accoladation for his impressive defensive and offensive skills. In 1936, he switched careers to professional baseball, becoming an American League referee. Hubbard died in 1977. Ken Houston's 14-season career began in 1967 at the Houston Oilers, with whom he would spend six impressive years. A talented attacker, runner and defender, Houston's skills were in high demand; In 1973, the Washington Redskins traded five of their players to bring him on board. Houston played for the Redskins for eight consecutive years before retiring. Another New York Giants veteran, Brandon Jacobs officially announced his retirement from professional football in early 2014. He spent a brief year with the San Francisco 49ers before returning to the Giants in 2013. Sorta Sage is the latest color to come to Google after No Pink and Sky Blue, and I'm very hopeful it extends from the Pixel 5 to other Google devices because this is the most perfect shade of green I've seen on a phone in five years. It's not so bright to evoke some candy-colored neon green, nor is it too dark to avoid being mistaken for teal or gray. It is precisely the right green for a look towards the earth. $700 on Amazon Beautiful, more vibrant and fun look Can rise even more with clear cases/accent Will clash with some case colors If Sorta Sage doesn't have all green with envy, there's always tried and true Just Black to give you that timeless look. Black is the color of the universal phone for a reason : it goes with everything and tends to get along better over time compared to whites and colors , and the matte look taken with Pixel 5 means it won't show oils, greases and fingerprints the second you remove it from the box. $700 on Amazon Everything Goes With Black Matte Texturing Avoid Avoidance Underrated black and professional is boring How seriously, get some color in your life The Google Pixel 5 is setting up to be one of the best Android phones, but before you can order yours, there's a final question to answer: what pixel 5 color is best for you and your wardrobe? There are only two colors to choose from this year, which gives a good contrast between two different looks: the low to the earth Sorta Sage, and the meticulous appearance of matte black. Best Pixel 5 Color Sorta Sage is full of wisdom and peace Source: Google Google has always brought an uncommon and unusually beautiful color option for the pixel flagship every year. For the first Pixel, it was Really Blue, the Pixel 3 was Not Pink, and last year's Pixel 4 went into action with Oh So Orange. This year, the color wheel stopped in green, and Google gave us the serene shade of sea green for the Google Pixel 5, and makes me want to take it on a nature walk right now. While you can always resort to a cool case for jazzing up the color of your phone, starting with a phone that has a great color means you can enjoy clear cases that show the natural beauty of the Pixel 5 - or go au naturale if it feels very daring. I'm a big proponent of the philosophy that life is too short for boring technology, and for most gadgets, there's nothing more boring than simple black. Of course, Just Black on the Pixel 5 is unclear by any stretch of the imagination. Unlike last year's shiny, stain-prone black back, covered in glass, the painted back of the Pixel 5's aluminum casing is a matte black with texture and variety. It's more like a fresh black board with grey charcoal mixed on the clean slate, with only a Google G silver on the back. If you're all about matte black life, the Just Black Pixel 5 is the best looking phone you've seen in three years, and I don't blame you for falling for it, especially if green isn't your color. Whatever Google Pixel 5 color you pick up, you're getting an excellently rounded phone that gives you performance and the perfect camera experience while allowing you to keep more money in your pocket than Samsung or OnePlus would take for your flagships. Precisely the right green for a look down on the earth. Sorta Sage is the latest color to come to Google after No Pink and Sky Blue, and I'm very hopeful it extends from the Pixel 5 to other Google devices because this is the most perfect shade of green I've seen on a phone in five years. It's not so bright to evoke some candy-colored neon green, nor is it too dark to avoid being mistaken for teal or gray. There's nothing just about this black beauty. If Sorta Sage doesn't have you all green with envy, there's always tried and true Just Black to give you that timeless look. Black is the color of your universal phone a reason – it goes with everything and tends to get better over time compared to whites and colors – and the matte look taken with the Pixel 5 means no oils, greases and fingerprints the second takes it out of the box.
